Who We Are and What We Do

LWC was established in 1979 and is the fastest-growing privately owned drinks company in the UK. With over 7000 different product lines and over 6000 on-trade customers, we provide the broadest range and greatest service available in the UK drinks industry. With our fantastic support services we provide our customers with a higher-quality experience and enable them to maximise their sales. Over 100 Account Managers are dedicated to bolstering your business potential whilst also eradicating any issues you may face.

What makes us different, you ask? Well, there are a few things, really. We have zero listing fees, giving us complete impartiality and helping to increase the depth of our range. We are also 100% demand driven: we only buy on behalf of our customers in relation to their needs and are able to provide the best balance of price, range and service. As an independent company, we're able to act quickly and decisively, a benefit mirrored in our depots, all of which are empowered to make their own decisions, meaning you can get what you want, when you want it. Speaking of 'when you want it', one of the biggest differences from our competitors is that we offer same day delivery*, seven days a week. Our decentralization means you get a better service – if you have a pub in Cornwall, you will place your order via our depot in Cornwall. Our commercial awareness has been provided by the experience we've gained in helping thousands of customers to grow their businesses. With a lot of our employees having come from the Hospitality sector and with over 50 of our own pubs, we definitely know what we're talking about when it comes to understanding the market from both sides as practitioners.

We supply a massive 7000+ range of products including over 1800 draught beers, 900 bottled beers, 200 ciders, 250 draught ciders, 2300 spirits, 1000 wines, 1000 soft drinks and 100 RTDs. If that's not enough and we don't have the product you need, our teams will work around the clock to ensure that it's made available for you. We've the versatility and flexibility to make decisions on the spot and service your needs to the highest possible standard. This also means we can provide you with all the products you need in one order – you won't have to worry about contacting different companies. You'll save time and money, allowing you to concentrate on other aspects of your business.

Delivery – our company has been built on, and continues to rely upon, our ever-growing internal distribution network. We cover the whole of the UK, most of our distribution operating 7 days a week with same-day delivery. In any areas where same-day delivery isn't possible, we guarantee next-day delivery. This is made possible by over 150 committed drivers who are out on the road each day, delivering in the morning, afternoon and early evening. *Same-day delivery orders must be placed before midday; otherwise they will be delivered the following day.

Knowing your product is vital when it comes to increasing sales; that's why we also provide Product Training. Having staff with the correct knowledge means they can offer advice confidently. We offer training on all products, as well as in-depth training programmes on Wines, Cask Ale, Beer & Cocktail Training.

Marketing materials can also be provided from our internal hub of expert graphic designers, who can create vast array of promotional materials for your business. The range of services offered includes menus, label design, banners, posters and POS.

Cask Market and Consumer Review

(Referenced from the 2017 Cask Report)

- 82% of licensed pubs claim cask ale sales are in growth.
- Cask ale takes up 58% of all on-trade ale (in comparison to 42% keg).
- The total on-trade beer market has decreased by 1.5% in a year, but the cask ale market value has increased by 6.3% in the last 5 years!

92% of consumers are keen to know more about beer styles, and offering them to try the beers before they buy results in more sales.

86% of cask ale drinkers think pub staff should have a good cask ale knowledge. When staff engage with the consumer about ale, 50% of the time it will result in ale sales.

60% of outlets don't offer enough information about beer taste, scent and colour.

90% of consumers say beer quality is very important when choosing which pub to visit.

60% of consumers would choose a smaller range of ales served in an immaculate condition over variety.

50% of consumers trust the brewer has the best knowledge of beer, suggesting 'meet the brewer' events could increase sales.

Cask consumers choose where to drink, are more loyal, visit more often, bring people and spend more money. A standard cask beer consumer spends £967 a year in comparison to £507.36 of other consumers.

Camerons Brewery Ltd is one of the largest private breweries in the UK, with the capacity to produce more than 1 million hectolitres of beer annually.

In addition to its core brewing operation, Camerons possesses a growing retail pub estate of more than 70 venues – ranging from community pubs and city centre venues to restaurant and accommodation based outlets. This includes the popular Head of Steam brand, which the firm acquired in 2014.

Camerons flagship brand is their Strongarm 'Ruby Red' ale which has been brewed for over 55 years. As well as its traditional ales such as Trophy Special and Steamer Smooth, the brewer, also has range a range of more modern beer styles with its Tontine milk stout, hoppy A-hop-alyse Now cask beer and their latest Motörhead collaboration brew Röd Crew.

The Brewery Process

The Foundation

WATER is the main ingredient and the foundation of any drink. It affects beer in three ways: the pH levels affect how the flavours are expressed; it can provide different flavour profiles depending on the sulphate-to-chloride ratios; and it can cause off flavours from chlorine or contaminants. Good water is considered to be moderately hard and have low or moderate alkalinity.

MALTS are cereal grains (usually barley) that have been dried in a process known as 'malting'. It is the source of sugars which are fermented into alcohol, and gives the beer its colour, scent and flavour. Depending on the desired flavour profile and the style of beer being brewed, there are five types of malts that may be used: base malts, light malts, roasted malts, dark malts and caramel malts.

HOPS started being used in brewing as a stability agent and for flavouring. The oils in hop flowers contain a tremendous amount of bitter, zesty/citrus flavours. There are many varieties that are used to produce different flavour profiles. In British ales the most common varieties are Goldings, Fuggles, and Bramling Cross. The New World Hops are used in beers with more intense hop character due to their more tropical flavours, with most commonly used varieties such as Galaxy (Australia), Nelson Sauvin (New Zealand), Citra, Centennial and Chinook (US).

YEAST acts as the fermenting agent in beer and converts the sugars produced from the malts into alcohol and CO<sub>2</sub>. Most old family brewers in England have their own different varieties of yeast strains that are unique to their brew house. In Belgium, monks and brewers use wild yeast for spontaneous fermentation to create very unique and tart flavours to some of their styles.

9 Tips on Keeping Cask Ale

1. ORDERING: Order the correct size of cask and aim to sell it within three days.

Why? If the cask is left for more than three days, the beer will start to taste dull and tired.

2. STORAGE: Casks must be stored in a temperature-controlled cellar between 11°C–13°C, ideally at 12°C (54°F).

Why? Beer needs to be at the right temperature to condition correctly.

3. STILLAGING: Casks should be stillaged for at least three days before sale. If some casks have to be stillaged later, roll them before stillaging.

Why? Level stillaging makes a gas pocket beneath the shive and encourages good venting when soft, porous pegs are inserted. As the sediment drops, it falls safely into the belly of the cask, away from the tapping point. If stillaged on a forward tilt, the gas pocket will be at the back of the cask, so beer and not carbon dioxide gas will be pushed through the soft porous tap.

4. PEGGING AND VENTING: Casks should be vented with a soft porous peg 2–6 hours after delivery. Check the cask frequently and change the peg if it becomes blocked. When strong fermentation finishes, insert a nonporous peg.

Why? This brings the beer to its ideal condition for the customer. It helps with the clarification process and once the beer is on sale it will help maintain the right amount of carbon dioxide.

5. TAPPING: Tap all casks 24–48 hours before they go on sale.

Why? This eliminates the opportunity for microorganisms to spoil the beer.

6. SAMPLING: Sample beers for clarity, aroma and taste after tapping each day before serving. Always sample from the cask before connecting the beer lines.

Why? Pulling through to the bar wastes beer and if the beer isn't ready, the customer notices.

7. SERVING: Once on sale, beer is exposed to air which causes rapid deterioration. Empty casks should be replaced within three days.

Why? Air drawn into the cask causes oxidation, which spoils the beer.

8. TILTING (STOOPING): Gently tilt the cask when it's between 1/2 and 2/3 full, either by raising the back or lowering the front. About three inches either way should be sufficient.

Why? Tilting the cask too far or too quickly could disturb the sediment, risking hazy beer.

9. CLEANING: Beer lines and equipment need to be cleaned every five days using the equipment and methods recommended by your beer company cask supplier.

Why? One of the most important factors in high-quality cask beer is the cleanliness of the dispense equipment. As well as harming the taste and clarity, dirty systems can cause malfunctioning and uncontrollable fobbing.

Beer Dictionary

ALE is a term used in the English language for a brew made with a top-fermenting yeast, which normally stands out with its fruitiness. Ales are brewed in varieties of strengths, colours and palates which are separated into styles.

CASK-CONDITIONED ALE is non pasteurised or filtered. It has a secondary fermentation and precipitation of yeast in a vented cask in the cellar of the pub. After the cask-conditioning process is completed, the final product should be clear with a very light natural carbonation, and between 11°C–13°C in temperature.

BITTER is a quintessentially British style; this beer is a well-hopped ale. The hops provide it with quite a healthy amount of bitterness, hence the name. This ale is traditionally served on draught, from a cask. An acidity to the finish is common, and the colour varies from light amber to deep copper from the darker malts used in the brew. Most traditional bitters will have an alcohol content of around 3.6%–4%. ‘Best’ or ‘Special’ bitters come in at 4.4%–7.5% ABV, and the odd ‘Extra Special’ bitter at about 5.5% and higher.

PALE ALE’S main characteristic is its light copper, straw colour with good head retention. That is achieved using paler malt varieties in the mash. These beers also usually have an ample amount of hops. One of the first English Pale Ales originated in Burton-upon-Trent, where the hard water used in the brewing helped to produce beers with clarity and enhanced the bitterness of the hops. Average alcohol content usually ranges from 3.8%–6% ABV.

MILD as a style was developed to have less hoppy flavours, and is therefore less bitter and a bit sweeter. Some are copper in colour, but most are dark brown. This particular type of ale was created to be drunk in large quantities by manual workers, and has suffered in recent years for its blue-collar image. It’s usually quite weak in alcohol, due to it being brewed for large consumption and is around 3%–4% ABV, but often full in body.

INDIA PALE ALE (IPA) originated as British Pale Ales for the Indian Empire which were made to a higher-than-normal strength, and given more hops, to protect them on the journey. Today, IPAs have evolved into many different style variations, using different hop varieties, influenced by the rise of craft beer in the 70s in the US. Their usual alcohol content is 3.6% or over.

STOUT originated as a stronger version of the English Porter. Typically dark brown to pitch black, this style commonly features the use of roasted barley, which is unmalted and kilned to the point of being charred, which lends a dry character as well as an abundant roasted flavour resembling coffee and dark chocolate. The hops are mainly in the background; therefore, the hoppy bitterness is almost unnoticeable, usually 4%–7% ABV. ‘Extra’, ‘Export’ and ‘Imperial’ styles have a heavier alcohol content. The latter was brewed as a winter warmer for the Tsarist Russian Empire with ABV anything from 7% to more than 10%.

PORTERS were loved by the transportation workers of Central London; it became extinct but was resurrected by the US in the 70s and 80s. Porter is the lighter-bodied brother of a Stout, which means it’s a dark (nearly black at times) beer, enriched with a variety of different malts: the base of a pale malt, with the addition of black, crystal and chocolate malts and/or smoked and roasted malts. Hop bitterness is very moderate. 4%–7% ABV.

Glassware

PINT: The most standard glass used to serve cask beer. The bulge near the top is constructed to accommodate frothy heads and helps make sturdy stacking. Pint has a little cousin, a glass called a half pint. They are identical to the pint, just half the size.

Use with: All Cask Ales.

TULIP: An exaggerated top lip gives this glass its floral name; it’s also responsible for supporting huge heads and promoting big smells.

Use with: Scotch ales, fruit beers, English barley wines, strong ales, and any beer with a substantial head or strong nose.

TIP: Cleanliness is close to godliness, even the smallest amount of soap, dust or lipstick can ruin a good pint. So why risk reputation, when this can be avoided by following a few simple steps?

- To keep glassware in pristine condition, ensure that you use a washer that is utilised for glasses. Dishwashers run at a different temperature and do not sanitise glass appropriately. Do not wash glassware and coffee cups together and make sure the glass washer is deep cleaned every 7 days.
- Air-dry your glasses; towels may abandon fibres or dust on wet glass. Try to renovate your glasses once a week; this removes any residue from rinse agents and other chemicals coating the glass surface. Finally, store glasses top-down to allow all water to evaporate and deter mould.

Beer Tasting

Taking a moment to smell your beer and linger on your first sip will make every beer a rewarding experience. After all, beer is made to be enjoyed!

APPEARANCE: Although colour and clarity aren’t necessarily an indication of the beer’s quality, the look of any given beer was crafted intentionally and it is a very integral part of the drinking experience. The clarity can vary from brilliant to cloudy and the head can tell you a more about the beer. Beers that aren’t extreme in their alcohol content should have good head retention and this often indicates a well-crafted beer, made with quality ingredients.

AROMA: Our sense of smell informs the way we taste things, opening up a complexity of flavours to the palate. If the beer has no instantly recognisable aroma, swirl it around in your glass and give it another sniff. This will release some carbonation, which will carry the aroma up to your nose.

FLAVOUR: The flavour should be a continuation of the aroma. There are a few added dimensions that will appear, most notably bitterness. Swirl the beer in your mouth before swallowing it.

MOUTH FEEL: This refers to the texture and weight of the beer, as opposed to the actual taste. High alcohol beer can have a warming quality, while bitter beers can sometimes be astringent. The weight, or body, of beer can also vary from being light and watery, to being full and heavy.

FINISH: The aftertaste can be sweet or bitter, and can take on many flavours, either in succession or all at once. Also notice the intensity of the finish. The finish of a beer depends greatly on the style in which it is brewed. The most important thing from here is: will you have another sip?

Partnerships

We offer the full range of beers from some of the oldest family brewers in the country, with whom we have an excellent working relationship.

BRAINS BREWERY · CARDIFF

Founded in 1882, Brains is Wales’s largest brewery. It is the official beer and sponsor of the Welsh Rugby Union as well as the F.A. of Wales and Glamorgan Cricket Club.

Brains’s award-winning beers are available throughout Britain as guest beers in numerous pubs. Flagship brands are Rev. James, Brains SA and Gold, plus a fantastic range of craft beers from their microbrewery.

CAMERONS BREWERY · HARTLEPOOL

Founded in 1865, Camerons is now the largest independent brewery in the North East and once again a family brewery. Their flagship cask beer ‘Strong Arm’ is a must-stock in its heart land and with their sales growing nationally, they have produced a fantastic range of monthly specials.

CHARLES WELLS BREWERY · BEDFORD

The Charles Wells name is synonymous with high quality brewing and great pubs, and has been ever since we were founded in 1876. With 140 years of brewing expertise we have grown from a small family business into the UK’s largest independent brewery, with an award winning portfolio of pubs and beers enjoyed by millions of people all over the world. However, we still take great pride in our heritage and still promote the same values as our founder Charles Wells, putting a focus on quality and innovation and keeping our customers at the heart of everything we do. Although the company continues to grow, we still remain a family business with the Wells family firmly at the helm.

MARSTON'S · BURTON

Proud of our heritage in the spiritual home of British brewing. Our beers come to you from Burton with love.

We started brewing in Burton-Upon-Trent in 1834. Then in 1898 we got itchy feet. So we moved down the road to the Albion brewery. We still like it so we’ve not moved again since.

We came to Burton for the water. Well, for the rocks the town was built on to be precise. The water trickles down through a thick layer of gypsum before we bring it back up again through our well. That’s what gives our beers the depth of flavour, character and crisp refreshing bitterness that you won’t find anywhere else in the world.

HYDES BREWERY · MANCHESTER

Founded in 1863 and still owned by the same family. During 2013, Hydes moved to their new cask ale brewery at Media City in Salford. They have developed a creative range of new and exciting craft cask beers under the Beer Studio and Provenance labels.

Hydes operate around 60 pubs. These include destination food houses, suburban locals and town centre venues and Hydes aim to make every one of these sites the best in its locality.

TIMOTHY TAYLOR · KEIGHLEY

The brewery remains in the Taylor family and is now the last independent brewery of its type left in West Yorkshire. This independence enables Taylor’s to survive as one of the few brewers still brewing true cask ales in the same way it has always done. The unique taste of Timothy Taylor’s beers can’t be put down to any single thing. It’s the result of years of hard work, skill and doing things the hard way because it makes the difference. Taking extra time, care and pride in traditional, hands-on brewing and making no compromises when it comes to ingredients.

Five Heriot Watt brewers oversee every brew. The finest grade barley Golden Promise is used along with Taylor’s unique water from the Knowle Spring, whole flower hops from expert growers and the unique strain of Taylor’s Taste yeast which is now over 1850 generations old.

BLACK SHEEP BREWERY · YORKSHIRE

In 1992, Paul Theakston dared to follow his heart and build a new brewery from scratch following the takeover of his family’s brewing firm. Paul dreamt of a perfect tasting, quality Yorkshire bitter - light amber, grassy fresh with a hoppy bite - and Black Sheep Best Bitter was born. It has been and remains a top ten best selling beer brand nationwide, is by far the biggest selling beer brewed by Black Sheep and is the official beer of Yorkshire County Cricket Club.

The sixth generation of the Theakston family brewing heritage is now proudly part of the Black Sheep story with Paul’s eldest two sons, Rob and Jo, now running the business. Black Sheep continues to brew much loved cask, keg and bottled beers in the time-honoured fashion, whilst going against the grain with a flow of new and experimental brews.

Nationally best-selling beers from our other partners.
