Autumn Insights

Key occasions and drinks trends set to drive October trading

As the evenings draw in, autumn brings a fresh wave of opportunities for the on-trade. From Halloween experiences to early festive planning, the season is packed with occasions that can drive footfall, increase dwell time and boost spend per head.

Today's consumers are looking for more than just a drink; they want memorable experiences. Limited-time menus, seasonal serves and themed events can help venues stand out, encouraging repeat visits while maintaining momentum after the summer months, and a very successful World Cup for many outlets.

Occasion Opportunities

HALLOWEEN: 31st October

Create Drinks Worth Talking About

Halloween has become one of the biggest experience-led occasions in the hospitality calendar. Guests are looking for immersive nights out, visually striking drinks and limited-time menus that feel exclusive, giving operators the opportunity to drive group bookings, social sharing and incremental spend.

Last year, spirits sales increased by 2.4% in the week leading up to Halloween (CGA by NIQ's Daily Drinks Tracker), highlighting the growing role premium drinks experiences play in seasonal trading.

Make the Most of the Occasion:

- Create limited-edition cocktail menus using bold flavours and striking serves, featuring brands such as Old J Spiced Rum, Buen Amigo Tequila and Moonshine Vanilla Vodka.
- Add seasonal flavour and creativity with Paixão and Monin Liqueurs, perfect for crafting Halloween-inspired cocktails, twists on classic serves and indulgent after-dinner drinks.

- Offer indulgent after-dark serves with Black Gold Coffee Tequila, perfect for Espresso Martinis and dessert-inspired cocktails.
- Create visually striking serves with bold colours, dramatic garnishes and seasonal flavours that encourage guests to share their experience on social media.
- Complete the occasion with themed décor, music and limited-time menus to keep customers engaged for longer.

BONFIRE NIGHT: 5th November

Turn Seasonal Celebrations Into Longer Stays

While Bonfire Night falls in early November, September and October are the ideal time to plan menus, promotions and stock requirements. As temperatures drop, consumers naturally gravitate towards richer flavours, comforting food and warming drinks, creating opportunities to increase dwell time and average spend.

Make the Most of the Occasion:

- Showcase warming spirits such as Old J Spiced Rum in its Dark and Gold variants, Iron Wheel Straight Bourbon and Old Monarch Scotch Whisky.
- Promote premium red wines and richer beer styles as customers transition away from lighter summer choices.
- Consider more bottled options for displays such as WKD's new Pineapple variant, on offer at £19.99.
- Build early momentum around local firework displays and community events with advance bookings and limited-time offers.

BEAUJOLAIS NOUVEAU Third Thursday in November

Build Anticipation Early

Another November occasion, Beaujolais Nouveau Day is best prepared for early, and September and October are the perfect time to start building awareness. Beaujolais continues to enjoy a resurgence – especially in Swansea, where 'Beaujolais Nouveau Day' has become a key calendar date – as consumers embrace lighter, fruit-forward red wines that offer freshness, versatility and excellent food-pairing potential.

Outlets keen to get ahead should ask their Account Manager about Jean-Luc Bon Pote, LWC's fast-moving Beaujolais Nouveau which will be in limited supply. For guaranteed delivery, please enquire as soon as possible!

Whether you're planning a dedicated Nouveau event or simply expanding your autumn wine offer, early promotion can help create excitement ahead of one of the wine world's most anticipated annual releases.

The Takeaway

Starting the conversation early helps create demand, encourages trial and positions your venue to make the most of Beaujolais Nouveau when it arrives.

A Bonfire Night staple: find Hitzkopf Mulled Wine at a very special price on page 30.

LOOKING AHEAD

Five Ways to Maximise Autumn Trading

- Create reasons to visit. Use occasions like Oktoberfest, Halloween and Bonfire Night to drive footfall during the shoulder season.
- Refresh your drinks offer. Introduce seasonal cocktails, warming spirits, continental lagers and autumn wine recommendations.
- Plan ahead. Build anticipation for Bonfire Night, Beaujolais Nouveau and the festive season with early promotions and events.
- Keep it simple. Focus on high-impact, high-margin serves that can be delivered consistently during busy trading periods.
- Create memorable experiences. Great drinks, seasonal menus and an engaging atmosphere are what keep customers returning.

Autumn is a season built on experiences

With the right range, seasonal serves and a little forward planning, operators can turn autumn into the perfect launchpad for a successful festive season.

WORLD BEER

THE CATEGORY TO WATCH

What was once a niche corner of the bar has grown into the biggest category in beer, and drinkers are actively seeking it out.

From crisp lagers with continental roots to bold, characterful styles from further afield, world beer now shapes how customers choose where to drink and what to order.

For operators, that shift means the range on your bar is no longer a nice-to-have — it's central to how your venue is perceived, and getting it right has never mattered more.

Not all world beer is created equal, though.

With so many brands now competing for space on the bar, the real opportunity lies in choosing the ones that stand out — through provenance, flavour, or simply a story worth telling.

Brands with a genuine point of difference don't just enhance customer appeal; they help protect and grow your margin, giving you a range that works as hard commercially as it does on taste. Get the selection right, and world beer becomes one of the most profitable, talked-about parts of your offer.
